Stories From the Field: Personal Insights From Working with Communities on Water and Sanitation Projects

Are you interested in volunteering or conducting research internationally? Have you wondered why people work internationally? Do you want advice on how to get started? Working within different settings to effect change around water, sanitation and health in developing communities can prove challenging but rewarding. Panelists will talk about their experiences, providing personal insights on the challenges, opportunities and rewards to working in the field. In particular, the speakers will provide valuable advice on the realities through anecdotal stories of volunteering or conducting research in developing countries.

Tuesday, November 27th 7:00 p.m.
McMaster University Campus

1280 Main Street West, Hamilton
A.N. Bourns Science Building (ABB)
Room 270
http://www.mcmaster.ca/welcome/campusmap.cfm

RSVP: contact.inweh@unu.edu
Refreshments will be provided